Linda Ohama, an award-winning Japanese-Canadian filmmaker will talk about her award-winning film, Shingetsu no Tohoku ( “New Moon over Tohoku” ) which concerns the experiences of people in Tohoku who were affected by the earthquake/tsunami/nuclear disaster of March 11, 2011, and its aftermath. “The Tohoku people help us recognize what it is that makes each of us human. We can’t ignore them so easily and lose the opportunity to learn about living, dying, being Japanese, and being human,” says Ohama. The film was the 2016 official selection in international film festivals in Rome, Vancouver, and Calgary. Further information about her film can be found at:
